Draft resource pending human editorial review - not yet professionally verified.

A short weekly review that captures what you practised, what improved, what got in the way, and the one thing you will focus on next week - to keep progress deliberate.

Learning objectives

- Summarise a week of practice honestly
- Name one clear improvement
- Identify one obstacle and a response to it
- Set a single focus for the next week

This week

- What I practised most (calls, roleplays, lessons): _____
- One thing that clearly improved: _____
- One thing that got in the way: _____
- What I will do differently about that obstacle: _____
- My single focus for next week: _____

Simple weekly tracker

Metric	This week	Note
Practice sessions completed
Roleplays completed
Lessons completed
Focus skill

Worked example (focus)

Improved: "openers feel more natural." Obstacle: "I skipped practice on busy days."

Response: "attach one five-minute roleplay to my morning coffee." Next week focus:

"pausing after questions." One focus is enough to actually move.

Safe-practice note

Review your own effort and behaviours, not vanity metrics or prospect data. Be honest but kind - the point is steady progress, not a perfect week. Keep only one focus so it is achievable.
