

Second-Attempt Callback

Script - Skill: follow-up - Difficulty: beginner - Est. 5 min

Draft resource pending human editorial review - not yet professionally verified.

A script for your second call after a missed first one - it references the earlier attempt lightly, gives a fresh reason to talk, and does not scold them for not answering.

Learning objectives

- Reference the earlier attempt without pressure
- Lead with a reason, not a complaint
- Offer an easy way to talk now or later
- Keep the tone patient and low-key

How to reference attempt one

- "I tried you earlier this week" is fine; "you did not pick up" is not.
- Assume they were busy, not avoiding you - usually true, always kinder.
- Lead with the reason for calling, not the fact that you called before.

Structure the callback

1. Re-introduce yourself briefly - they may not remember the first attempt.
2. Give the one relevant reason for the call.
3. Offer to be quick now or to find a better time.

Worked example

"Hi Jordan, Sam with Northlight again - I tried you earlier in the week, figured the timing was just busy. I called because weekend coverage tends to get harder as support teams grow, and I help with exactly that. Happy to be quick now if it is a decent moment, or I can catch you another time - whichever is easier for you."

Safe-practice note

Do not let a second attempt carry any edge of "why did you not call me back" - the prospect owes you nothing. Keep attempts spaced and reasonable; repeated rapid calls read as pressure. If the second attempt goes nowhere, treat that as a signal, not a reason to try five more times.
