

Top-Five Objections Cheat Sheet

Cheat Sheet - Skill: objections - Difficulty: beginner - Est. 5 min

Draft resource pending human editorial review - not yet professionally verified.

A quick-reference card for the five objections you will hear most, each with a calm acknowledgement and one honest follow-up, so you are never caught silent.

Learning objectives

- Recall a calm response to five common objections
- Acknowledge before you respond
- Ask one honest question instead of arguing
- Spot the difference between a reflex and a firm no

Quick responses

Objection	Say this	Then
Not interested	"Fair enough, thanks for being direct."	One question about the reason.
Bad time	"Totally understand."	Offer a specific callback time.
Send an email	"Happy to."	Ask one thing to make it relevant.
No budget	"Makes sense."	Ask what would need to change for it to matter.
Already sorted	"Good to hear."	Ask what is working and what they would improve.

Rules of the road

- Never sigh, argue, or imply they are making a mistake.
- One honest question is fine; a second push after a firm no is not.
- If they repeat the no, thank them and end the call.

Worked example

Prospect: "No budget." You: "Makes sense - most teams are careful right now. Out of interest, what would need to change for something like this to be worth a look?" If the answer is "nothing this year," respond: "Understood, thanks for the honesty - I will not chase you."

Safe-practice note

Handling an objection means understanding it, not overpowering it. Do not use guilt, false deadlines, or scare tactics. Respect a firm no the first time it is clearly a firm no.
